Clodagh makeover is completed at Six Senses Kaplankaya

Luxurious resort and spa on Aegean coast to reopen in May featuring the global debut of the Six Senses Holistic Anti-Ageing Clinic

TURKEY: Continuing Six Senses' deeper expansion into Europe, the luxurious Six Senses Kaplankaya resort and spa will reopen in May 2018.

Located across the bay from Bodrum on the ancient Aegean coast, the 141-bedroom resort and spa has benefitted from a redesign by the eco-conscious studio Clodagh Design.

The 10,000sqm spa is one of the most extensive and advanced spa and wellness offerings in the Six Senses global portfolio. Laid out over two floors, the spa, formerly operated by Canyon Ranch, offers 20 treatment rooms, an extensive hydrotherapy area and an indoor Watsu pool.

Treatments will use products by Biologique Recherche, Swiss Perfection and ila, while Gharieni has supplied the treatment beds and Technogym has installed a private Kinesis studio.

In addition to a comprehensive range of spa, fitness and wellness programmes, there will also be a Six Senses Alchemy Bar, where guests can create their own lotions from selected organic ingredients.

Speaking about the design concept, Clodagh said: "We enriched the space with warmth, colour and texture, as well as enhancing wellness through design by creating spaces like the Alchemy Bar, where guests can pick from a massive herbal wall and mix the herbs with local oils.

"We further infused the property with the essence of Six Senses by addressing every sense.

Feng shui and the wisdom and science of bio-geometry master Alberto Amura have been incorporated throughout, so that crystals, resonance symbols and the curated placement of art unite to heal and balance the body, mind and soul."

The Kaplankaya spa will also be the first in the portfolio to launch a Six Senses Holistic Anti-Ageing Clinic, led by neuroscientist Dr Claudia Aguirre.

"We'll delve deeply into various lifestyle factors – what we eat and drink, our stress levels and hormonal balance – and other parameters such as insulin resistance, the quality of sleep and the toxicity of our body," said Anna Bjurstam, vice-president of spas and wellness at Six Senses. "It's an exciting approach to wellness that we expect will really benefit guests."
