Designers' projects come to life one page at a time

By Jennifer Young

Book: An Architect's Cookbook: A Culinary Journey Through Design

Firm: Glen & Company

The details: Reflecting on his firm's first 16 years (Glen Coben opened his namesake studio in 2000), An Architect's Cookbook is a tasty exploration of restaurant design, pairing his own project memories and details with signature recipes straight from the chefs themselves, including Mary Dumont and Gabriel Kreuther, as well as a seafood bolognese dish from Coben's very own kitchen.

Book: Life-Enhancing Design

Designer: Clodagh

The details: Enter the holistic designer's world with 250 vivid photographs in 224 pages that demonstrates how Clodagh's inspiring design can be good for the body, mind, and soul.

Book: Nourishing the Senses:

Restaurant Architecture of Bentel & Bentel

Firm: Bentel & Bentel

The details: Showcasing restaurant design's exhilarating renaissance over the past few years, Bentel & Bentel's book offers a behind-the-scenes look at some of the firm's most iconic haunts, including New York staples Eleven Madison Park, Gramercy Tavern, and Le Bernardin.

Book: Lifting the Gaze

Firm: Juul | Frost Architects

The details: Danish architects and founding partners Helle Juul and Flemming Frost revisit three notable works in 144 pages while examining architecture's vital role in how we live, learn, and work.
